Lucerne University of Applied Sciences and Arts

Facts and Figures

Lucerne University of Applied Sciences and Arts is one of seven regional, public-funded universities of applied sciences founded in 1997. The University was called University of Applied Sciences of Central Switzerland until October the 15th 2007. The Lucerne University of Applied Sciences and Arts is a university of applied sciences that is supported by the six cantons of Central Switzerland. With over 5,800 students attending bachelor's and master's degree programmes, almost 4,400 students attending continuing and executive education programmes, and 556 projects in research and development, it is the largest educational institution in this region, the heart of Switzerland.

A bachelor’s or master’s degree programme at the Lucerne University of Applied Sciences and Arts provides student with the best foundation for achieving their career goals. The continuing and executive education programmes based on up-to-the-minute research, and informed by best practice.

The University offers English and German based education with levels from undergraduate to graduate. Bachelor, Master and certificate programs are available in fields like design, music, fine arts, animation 2D/3D, object design, banking & finance, international management & economics, sustainable energy systems to name a few.

Schools

- School of Engineering and Architecture (Hochschule Luzern – Technik & Architektur)
- Business School (Hochschule Luzern – Wirtschaft)
- School of Social work (Hochschule Luzern – Soziale Arbeit)
- School of Art and Design (Hochschule Luzern – Design & Kunst)
- Lucerne School of Music was formed in 1999 when the city's Conservatory of Music, Academy of Church Music, and Jazz School merged into a single university-status institution, called Musikhochschule Luzern

Exchange and Research Collaboration with China

- Tsinghua University (student exchange in engineering and architecture)
- Central Academy of Fine Arts (student and faculty exchange in architecture)
- Shanghai Jiaotong University (student exchange in business engineering)
- Wuhan University (student exchange in electrical engineering)